About Us

Countless interviews, highway miles and bottomless cups of truck stop coffee have gone into this website. Twenty one years later, those opportunities to share both counter top conversations and asphalt roadways with professional truck drivers, have provided valuable insight into the challenges you face every day.

Over time I found myself emersed in virtually every aspect of the trucking industry: truck stops, service shops, wrecker yards, dealerships, and state trucking associations. Research required appointments at federal offices, State Capitol buildings, D.O.T. and Highway Patrol...from Weigh Stations clear up to the Director's Office!

And the long miles have provided me the necessary "think time" to put it all together.

As you move about this site, Driver, you will read with the same ease with which you drive; shifting gears from State to State, milepost by milepost, within a trucker-friendly format. View or print highways and full color maps whenever you need them. Learn and gain inspiration from extraordinary heretofore untapped and unavailable resources. Enter "through the front door" as you click to view service location web sites. From page design to text size, logos to graphics, we've kept you and your road-weary eyes in mind.

Truth be told, Driver, each morning in my quiet time, you inspire me to get it right.

Hopefully, the slogan that hangs in my office will tell you all you really need to know about TruckerGuide. "By the work, you know the workman."
